New location appeal for coat rack return

The Observer and the Four Streets Project are planning to bring the community coat rack back this winter – and are looking for support from a Chichester business.

The joint initiative proved a huge success when it launched at the start of the year near the Market Cross.

A new location will have to be found this winter and the Observer is looking for a city centre business to help.

Donna Ockenden, from the Four Streets, said: "The coat rack proved a big success when it ran over January and February, we know more than 200 people who needed a coat picked one up.

"Between the Observer and Four Streets we will manage the rack again this year when it returns. We are looking for a shop within the four streets to agree to have it outside their business while it runs."

Any business owner who wants to discuss this further should ring Donna on 01243 786993.
